

Hybrid Home Education

At LPCA, we're at the forefront of transforming the landscape of home education. We firmly believe that the power of choice lies in your hands. Here, you have the freedom to shape your student's educational journey based on your preferences and needs. At LPCA, we design curriculum, class size, attendance, teacher involvement, and annual progress assessments, so that you have the time to enjoy home educating your student.

LPCA is built on a Christian foundation that centers on the development and success of both your child and your family. We are committed to making hybrid home education an enjoyable and fulfilling experience for all.

Our K-8 hybrid program is designed to offer a dynamic educational experience. Your student will be immersed in a nurturing environment where they attend classes on our campus three days a week (Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday) throughout the school year. These classes are intentionally kept small to ensure personalized attention and tailored learning. Explore the enriching on-campus experience, where your student can engage with our dedicated educators and fellow students.

Experience our Five-Week Explorations: Dive into our exciting five-week explorations, designed to broaden your student's horizons and provide unique learning opportunities.

At LPCA, we're dedicated to empowering you and your student with the best educational choices. Join us in reimagining education today!

Life Prep Christian Academy

18841 Fl-31
North Fort Meyers, FL 33917

Phone: 833-937-5722
www.WeareLPCA.com
Email: team@lifeprepchristianacademy.com

You can use your Florida PEP Scholarship (www.stepupforstudents.org) to pay tuition at LPCA

www.wearelpca.com

An Invitation to Parents

Discover the educational options for your student

833-937-5722

Life Prep Christian Academy White Paper on Educational Choice

“I didn’t think I could homeschool my kids.
LPCA made it possible”

Consider hybrid home education instead of traditional homeschooling. Center your student’s education in the home and utilize the variety of resources available with LPCA to make your experience successful and enjoyable.

“Taking the Fear, Anxiety, Stress, and much of the Work out of Homeschooling”

Today,
parents have several educational options to consider
for their students:

Public Education Enrollment:

This option includes enrolling your student in a local public school, a charter school, or potentially a public school outside your immediate school district. It's important to note that your tax dollars fund public education, which makes it a government-designed and government-funded choice.

Non-Public or Private School Enrollment:

Non-public or private schools in the state offer a wide range of educational opportunities. These institutions can be Christian-based, Catholic-based, secular, or privately sponsored. Recent educational choice legislation may make some of your tax dollars available to help cover the costs associated with non-public or private schools. Generally, enrolling your student in a non-public or private school tends to be the most costly of the enrollment options.

Home Education Enrollment:

Home education encompasses various options, with the most commonly known being traditional homeschooling. Homeschooling provides flexibility and freedom but requires parents to take on various responsibilities including making curriculum decisions, seeking outside support and co-op opportunities, developing and implementing lesson plans, planning and coordinating outside activities and field trips, maintaining necessary records, and arranging for your student to undergo either testing or have their work reviewed annually by a state-licensed educator. This is the most “parent involved” option. It's worth noting that there are scholarships available to home educators to help offset some of the associated costs.

In summary, parents have the important responsibility of choosing the best educational path for their student(s), and these three primary options offer various benefits and considerations. Each choice comes with its unique advantages and challenges.

What if there was a way to combine the best aspects of all three enrollment options to educate your student?

We believe there is, Hybrid Home Education